One hundred and thirty-nine patients with peripheral vascular obstructions underwent 139 percutaneous transluminal angioplasties (PTAs) of the femoropopliteal tract. Follow-up was obtained in 88 of 139 patients (63%) at an average of 18 months. In the remaining 41 patients (27%), follow-up was performed by physical examination and objective patency testing. The patency rate by life table analysis was 75% at 1 year, 60% at 2 years, and 47% at 3 years. Subgroup analysis revealed that the patency rate is greater in patients with a single versus multiple lesions in this region (90% vs. 63%). In patients with successful PTA who developed minor complications, the patency rate was 82%. Major complications occurred in 12% of the patients and were directly related to the lesion type (fibrous, occlusive, or elastic lumen). Subgroup analysis also demonstrated that lesions in the fibrous type had a successful patency rate of 88%, while occlusive lesions had a patency rate of 66% (p less than 0.05). The overall success rate of the procedure was 85% in this series. The long-term patency rate of endovascular therapy for peripheral vascular disease lies between 50% and 80% at f678ea9f9e
